Leadership Los Alamos 2016 Class

John Gulas, CEO/President of Los Alamos National Bank said "LANB is proud to have partnered with Leadership Los Alamos for the past 12 years, inspiring new leaders to serve the needs of Los Alamos and surrounding communities. Many of LANB's employees have benefitted from participating in the program and continue to contribute to the quality of life we all enjoy in areas of economic development, cultural arts and education."

Harry Burgess, Los Alamos County Manager said "Leadership Los Alamos has been a great partner and resource for educating community members (including our staff). Their curriculum utilizes issues of local interest to demonstrate their goal of developing present and future community leaders."

Roger Waterman, Owner of TRK said "Although we live in a government town, I found that the discussions at the Leadership Los Alamos sessions were more relevant and focused on small business concerns than I ever experienced in an institutional setting like the Lab or County."

Jason Lott, Superintendent of Bandelier said "Leadership Los Alamos provides an exceptional opportunity for Bandelier staff to integrate and network into the community. Having staff working with the range of local organizations and events only serves to strengthen partnerships and work for the common good."

What is LLA?

LLA is a unique opportunity for 20-25 individuals who live or work in Los Alamos and are committed to assuming roles of responsibility in civic, charitable, and governmental organizations in the region. Class participants will develop their skills to shape the future of the region.

Program Objectives:

- a) Identify and select highly motivated, emerging leaders to participate in the program.
- b) Systematically inform, challenge, and educate participants regarding the opportunities and needs of the community as well as the dynamics of social and economic change.
- c) Counsel participants on management and leadership skills and their application to civic and community leadership positions.
- d) Develop interpersonal relationships and esprit de corps among participants to enable them to work together on community projects and programs.
- e) Create dialogue and rapport among participants and existing community leaders.
- f) Identify opportunities for individual and organizational community involvement.

Your Commitment

The program starts with a 2-day orientation on September 10th and 11th. Then, classes meet for all-day sessions (8am – 5pm) one Friday each month through the middle of May 2017. See the schedule below.

Each session will focus on a different civic-oriented topic or issue. To successfully complete the program, participants MUST attend the entire Orientation and Closing sessions and at least five of the remaining seven sessions. Missing two halves of any of those sessions will count as missing a whole session.

In addition, each participant MUST actively participate in activities to observe, discuss and put leadership into action during the year.
